

Sara Bharwani (kneeling left of banner) and Melanie Meijer zu Schlochtern of Nature Foundation (right) with LU Dean of Students Fleming and campaign volunteers.

Breathe Better Air gives to Nature Foundation

CAY HILL--Led by high school student Sara Bharwani, the Breathe Better Air volunteers made a financial donation to Nature Foundation this week at Learning Unlimited (LU) Preparatory School. Funds were raised from the sale of T-shirts bearing the “Breathe Better

Air” logo. Bharwani started the campaign in 2018, due to her aggravated allergies caused by the then constantly on-fire landfill. She took her message of the need for better air for herself and other residents to social and other media and gathered fellow students to volunteer to visit the landfill to survey people in and around the area about their health issues. With fires no longer an immediate issue, Bharwani continues her campaign by including in her message the benefits of using biodegradable food containers and tableware as a means of tackling the growing landfill. She shared her message with Green Initiative, a group of environmental non-governmental organisations, in August. Attending the session was a group from the Panama-based United Nations Environmental Protection arm UNEP/ROLEC. Bharwani was also an exhibitor at the St. Maarten Mini EnviroFair organised by the No Kidding with Our Kids Foundation.

